Special Collections defined:

Special Collections consists of books and materials that are of significant historical value to the university or community at large, including copies of theses and dissertations by Florida Tech students. Featured in this display are only a few of the many rare, significant, and archival materials housed in the Evans Library.

Accessing Special Collections:

When searching for materials in the catalog, the following abbreviation and words, “SPECCOL SPECIAL (nocirc)”, indicate that an item is housed in Special Collections. With the item’s call number in hand, visit the Service Desk for assistance in obtaining the desired materials.

Florida Tech Publications:

Housed in the Evans Library’s special collections are copies of the Ad Astra, the Crimson from February 1968 to present, Tech Talk from 1998 to 2000, Florida Tech Today from 1992 to present, and Campus Observer from 2000 to present.

Theses and Dissertations:

The Library keeps in its collection two copies of each thesis and each dissertation written at Florida Tech. An archival copy of a thesis or dissertation is held in the new Thesis and Dissertation Room on the third floor of the Evans Library.

General John B. Medaris Collection:

Maj. Gen. John Bruce Medaris (Ret.) was commanding general of the U.S. Army Ballistic Missile Agency, responsible for Redstone and Jupiter missile programs and initiation of the Pershing and Saturn programs. This collection includes his scrapbooks, speeches, and other professional and personal papers, as well as his military decorations and collected souvenirs of his military travels.

Jerome P. Keuper Collection:

Dr. Keuper was the founder and first president of Florida Institute of Technology. Evans Library recently acquired a number of his professional and personal papers, books, and other mementos related to his remarkable university career.

Edwin A. Link Collection:

This collection focuses on the oceanographic work of Edwin A. Link, including maps and charts, photographs, manuscripts, blueprints, books and many other items of interest. Link invented the "blue box" or "Link Trainer" flight simulator. Some materials are on display in the Edwin A. Link Multimedia Room on the second floor.

To access a bibliography of the items available in the Link Collection please visit the Library’s home page at www.lib.fit.edu.
