FROM THE DEAN’S DESK: SUMMON

“Life’s splendor forever lies in wait. . . . If you summon it by the right word, by its right name, it will come.”

Franz Kafka

Summon, the newest tab on the Library website, guides you instantly, almost magically, to almost all of the Library’s authoritative content: books, articles, newspapers, databases, and more. Summon performs a Google-like search of the Library’s physical and electronic content at one go, stacking the most relevant resources at the top of the results list. Summon limits results to full-text, peer-reviewed articles within a certain date range, or broadens your search beyond the Library collection, and requests those items through ILLiad.

Summon is simple. Summon is fast. Summon is familiar. Please remember: “almost all.” Summon will not search some resources like SciFinder Scholar. Summon is not the only tool for a serious researcher. Summon is a great place to start.
