LIBRARY DISPLAYS

Coming soon to the Library is the latest installment of its multi-year Florida Tech Research Showcase – College Series. This exhibit will feature the College of Engineering, organized according to five leading-edge multi-disciplinary themes:

- Sustainability of the Environment
- Intelligent Systems
- Assured Information and Cyber Security
- New Space Systems and Commercialization of Space
- Communication Systems

Continuing in the Library is a popular exhibit, The Books of David Macaulay. Visitors can see a complete collection of Macaulay’s books, which fascinate readers of all ages. This display complements the recent Foosaner Art Museum exhibit of Macaulay’s paintings, sketches, and models.

As with all the Library’s lobby displays, Web counterparts are designed and made available at http://lib.fit.edu/?app=librarydisplays.

WELCOME, JOHN RODGERS!

John Rodgers, the new Assistant Manager of Information Technology at the Evans Library, received his B.S. - Software Engineering at Florida Tech. He belongs to the Association of Computing Machinery, serving as the campus chapter president in 2010, and to Alpha Phi Omega – Alpha Gamma Rho chapter. He brings to the Library his work experience in a variety of computer systems positions.

FALL 2011 GRADUATE RESEARCH WORKSHOP – WAITING LIST

Full capacity for the Library’s Fall 2011 graduate research workshop has been reached. Now, when students register for the Saturday morning, October 22 event, they will be added to a waiting list, if desired. Reminder: registration for the two Spring 2012 graduate research workshops will be opened in January. All are encouraged to watch for announcements.

FROM THE DEAN’S DESK: THE LIBRARY - VENUE FOR CAMPUS EVENTS

The Library co-hosted with Dr. Jamie Younkin The Language of Drums: A Performance Introduction to North Indian Drumming on September 22. Dr. Lowell Lybarger, Arkansas Tech University’s music/multimedia librarian and the director of the Pendergraft Music Lab, played the Tabla drums in the first concert of the 2011-2012 Humanities & Communication Performing Arts Series to an enthusiastic audience of students, faculty, and series subscribers.

On Friday, September 9, the Library hosted a panel discussion, Study Abroad Experience: Educational, Cultural, Environmental, and Personal Enrichment, in conjunction with the most recent research showcase featuring the Nathan M. Bisk College of Business. Focusing on a summer course of study in Spain, faculty, staff, and students shared the benefits and logistics of this new, growing program.
